

Red Berenson Aid To Francis

Red Berenson has been named assistant coach of the Blues and Garry Unger will replace Berenson as team captain, the National Hockey League team announced yesterday.

Berenson, 36 years old, will remain active as a player in addition to assisting general manager-coach Emile Francis.

During the exhibition season, Berenson demonstrated he wasn't anywhere near ready to retire as he led the Blues in scoring with six goals and four assists for 10 points. His linemates, left winger

Ted Irvine and right winger Jerry Butler, tied for second place, each with four goals and four assists for eight points.

In taking over as captain, Unger will become only the fifth player in 10 years to hold that job. Al Arbour was the Blues' original captain, followed in order by Berenson, Jimmy Roberts, Barclay Plager and Berenson again.

Unger has been with the Blues since midway through the 1970-71 season and is second only to Bob Plager in seniority among current players on the team's roster.

Now the Blues' assistant coach, Red Berenson begins his fifteenth NHL season. The Red Baron, one of the Blues' original stars who was traded away and then later reacquired, probably is best remembered for his historic six-goal game in Philadelphia on Nov. 7, 1968.

Larry Patey probably is looking forward to this season more than anyone else on the roster as he seeks to make up for last season when the burden of a series of injuries and his arrival in an unpopular trade were too much to overcome. Based on his exhibition showing, Larry, a newlywed should win over the fans quite easily this season.

In a long and controversial career, Derek Sanderson enjoyed his finest season ever in 1975-76 and is hoping for more of the same. Although bothered by a sore back during training camp, Derek is expected to team with Lefley and again perform his magic with the puck.

The holder of almost all the Blues' career scoring records and the NHL's ironman, team captain Garry Unger begins his seventh season with the Blues. He has played in an NHL record 645 consecutive games (424 of them with the Blues).

Irvine netted the winning goal at 18:19 of the second period when he shovelled a rebound under rookie Toronto goalie Mike Palmateer for a 3-1 lead. Irvine counted assists on Red Berenson's second period goal and Jerry Butler's third period marker. Pierre Plante got two goals, the Blues' first marker at 18:05 of the opening period and their final goal with eight seconds left in the game. Blues captain Gary Unger scored the other goal.

It is a sign of the players' respect for coach-general manager Emile Francis that a player such as Patey accepts his part-time status so graciously.

"I think everyone on the team has a great respect for Emile," said team captain Garry Unger. "We might not always agree with what he does, but we're convinced he's doing it for the good of the team, so we don't question him, we just give it the best shot we can."

Blues register 'very big win'

CHICAGO (UPI) — Emile Francis, the St. Louis Blues' general manager and coach, was elated.

"This was a very big win for us. The biggest of the year," he said after his Blues downed the Chicago Black Hawks 5-3 Wednesday night. "We should have buried them when we jumped into a 3-0 lead but they took advantage of a couple miscues and were right back in the game."

He said a fight may have helped spur the Blues to victory.

"Our guys have the killer instinct and I'd say Bob Gassoff's fight with Grant Mulvey got us going real good. Now we've got a six-point lead over Chicago, one game in hand and they have to play us the final two games of our series on St. Louis ice."

St. Louis captain Garry Unger scored the Blues' third first-period goal and set up Gilles Marotte with the go-ahead goal early in the final period.

"We shouldn't have let them come back after being down 3-0, but we seemed to play harder after they tied us. Maybe if our games were close we'd do much better."

Hawks Coach Bill White offered no excuses.

"I suppose I should take the rap," he said. "Some of our guys weren't going and I kept playing them."

"It was a big game and we just weren't ready," White said. "We got caught in the first period and it was catch-up hockey all night."

Francis said that while the National Hockey League's Conn Smythe division had been criticized as being weak, the Blues can compete with any team.

"Don't kid yourself with that weak Smythe Division stuff," he said. "We'll beat a lot of teams' butts before this season is over."

Marotte's goal, which snapped a 3-3 tie, came with 3:35 gone in the third period, moments after Dick Redmond and Stan Mikita beat St. Louis goalie Doug Grant with goals in a 13-second span to tie the game.

This isn't to condone brawling, but if the Blues had a little more feeling for one another, if Bob Gassoff didn't have to do all the dirty work by himself, the team might be better off.

Garry Unger, appointed captain at the beginning of the season, has been leading by example working harder than usual, in recent weeks. Perhaps not coincidentally, Unger's scoring revival (six goals in the last eight games) has come since Derek Sanderson was dispatched to the minor leagues.

When Francis took over as coach and general manager of the Blues, he promised to bring stability to the franchise. He has delivered on the promise.

But he also promised to give us a Blues team that was more consistent than those in recent seasons and he also promised to develop a strong power-play unit.

The Blues have not been more consistent and under Francis have compiled a record (21-22-5) that isn't even as good as the mark (17-17-9) the team had last

"THERE WASN'T MUCH tension for a 1-0 game," said Harvey Bennett, who took the Flyers' season scoring lead (2-2-4) against St. Louis with his assist on Ross Lonsberry's game-deciding goal midway in the first period. "I wasn't overly impressed with the way they played. Of course, I haven't been that impressed with them for a year and a half."

Garry Unger, the Blues' captain who accompanied the Flyers' All-Star delegation on their fog-delayed nine-hour trip from Vancouver to St. Louis Wednesday, was impressed with his fellow travelers.

Boston's Rick Middleton scored on Peter McNab's picture-perfect feed to establish the 2-1 Bruins advantage early in the final period.

Blues captain Garry Unger retaliated 3 minute later, however, on Pierre Plante's pass and Bob MacMillan sent St. Louis ahead two minutes afterward with a 30-foot slapshot from the left faceoff circle.

The Blues, who has lost four games in a row, increased their lead in the NHL's Smythe Division to three points over the idle Chicago Black Hawks despite the tie.

Cheevvers, naturally, saw the play differently.

"You're allowed two fakes," he said. "I caught it, dropped it and then passed it to Brad (Park). I made one fake and you're allowed two."

When questioned whether he was certain the rule book spelled out the "two fake" rule, Cheevvers replied, "Oh, I don't know, they keep changing the rules all the time."

The NHL rule book, surprisingly, never spells out what it requires for the referee to blow the puck dead, but rule 57 (a) does state that "a goalkeeper who holds the puck with his hands for longer than three seconds shall be given a minor penalty."

Did Cheevvers hold the puck for three seconds?

"I thought so, but I guess three seconds is a pretty long time," said Blues captain Garry Unger, who skated out to question Harris why the play was allowed. "I guess it doesn't matter anyway, because he (Harris) said Cheevvers skated out to the blueline with the puck on his stick."

BLOOMINGTON, Minn., March 28 — The Blues had a little get together after their arrival here last night.

Coach Emile Francis called a rare evening practice session for 10 o'clock, but had all the players report to the dressing room at the Metropolitan Sports Center at 8:30.

Because it doesn't take an hour and a half to put on their uniforms and lace up their skates, the players obviously were being called in for something other than a routine practice.

"One thing's for sure, it wasn't to celebrate clinching first place," said Francis of the lengthy meeting before the team went on the ice to practice.

In addition to delivering a stern lecture, Francis stripped Garry Unger of the team captaincy. The coach reportedly told the players, "None of you deserve to be captain."

Unger would not comment on the matter today. Francis said, "We don't need any chiefs. We need more Indians. We'll have no captain the rest of the season."

Rules require that a team have a captain for each game. Francis said a captain would be designated game-by-game.

St. Louis Blues Coach Emile Francis removed Garry Unger as his team's captain, explaining that "no one has been playing well enough to deserve being captain." Francis, however, said the move was not a disciplinary one aimed at Unger, but instead was an attempt designated captain for last night's game, replacing Garry Unger, who was removed as captain by Francis at a team meeting Sunday night.

"We don't have a captain," said Francis. "We'll designate someone else every game on a rotating basis. We have plenty of players to go around."

Unger said he was relieved to be relieved as captain.

"I feel like a piano's been lifted off my back," said Unger. "Being captain is just an aggravation. Now I feel a lot less pressure and can worry only about playing my game. Being captain or not being captain isn't important, winning is all that matters and maybe by not being captain I'll be able to play better and help us win more games."

With last night's victory, Minnesota climbed into a tie with the idle Vancouver Canucks for the third and final Smythe Division playoff spot. The Blues already have clinched first place in the Smythe Division.

Chicago, second with 63 points, would tie the Blues with 89 points if the Black Hawks would win their three remaining games and the Blues lost their final three games. But the Blues would win the title on the basis of more victories, 30-29.

Plager Fails To Get Contract, Assignment

Blues' defenseman Bob Plager failed to receive a contract or assignment as the club distributed its talent yesterday in preparation for breaking training camp in Port Huron, Mich.

Plager's contract ran out at the end of last season and he came into camp unsigned. Not getting a contract and not being assigned to one of the farm teams means he is a free agent.

Plager has been with the club for 10 years and played in their first game as an NHL franchise.

A total of 22 players have been assigned to the varsity for the remainder of the training season.

Veteran center Red Berenson, who served as assistant coach last season, has been named team captain, filling a spot that had been empty since late last season when Garry Unger was removed as captain. Jimmy Roberts will serve as alternate captain.

The goalies retained are Eddie Johnston, Ed Staniowski and Yves Belanger.

Here is a list of assignments:

The Blues finished below .500, so Francis had his first losing season as a coach in the National Hockey League. In nine seasons as coach of the New York Rangers Francis never had a losing season, although in those nine seasons he never won a division title as he did with his losing record as coach of the Blues.

Stripping Unger of his captain's title was not primarily a disciplinary action for Unger, although apparently Francis and Unger are disappointed in one another as player and coach this season. But rather the removal of Unger was intended to relieve him of some pressure. Francis made the move after he heard grumbling from other players about the captain's responsibility for the team's loss.

"I'd given it a lot of thought," Francis said, "because there was an inclination on the part of some to point the finger at the captain."

Unger was somewhat wistful about losing the distinction but said he was relieved.

"Francis is the boss, and it's better this way," said Unger. "There's really no use for a captain these days because you can't talk to the referee. Being captain is just an aggravation. Now I feel a lot less pressure."

With no replacement named for Unger, Francis began using a designated captain for each game, and Larry Patey, Claude Larose and Chuck Lefley served in that role. Presumably they were playing to Francis' standards.

The Blues played with some revived spirit in a 5-4 loss to the Minnesota North

Berenson Appointed Captain Third Time

ST.LOUIS —

You've heard of a guy being team captain once, maybe even twice but never three times.

Veteran Red Berenson has been named the 1977-78 captain of the Blues by new coach Leo Boivin, marking the third time the redhead has worn the coveted C on his jersey.

Berenson replaces Garry Unger as team ice leader. Unger was removed as captain near the end of last season. Berenson was first appointed St.Louis captain in 1970-71 and again in 1975-76 after returning to the Blues in a trade from Detroit.

On the ice, Francis finally won the divisional crown—which had eluded him in 11 seasons as coach of the New York Rangers—despite the fact that the Blues were seven games under .500 in the weak Smythe Division. In the playoffs, St. Louis was swept by Montreal in four straight games.

The Blues scored 239 goals and allowed 276. If they want to maintain their hold in the Smythe Division, they'll have to reverse those figures.

No one St. Louis player was in the NHL's top 25 scorers last year and normally dependable Gary Unger was such a disappointment that Francis removed him from his responsibility as team captain. Unger, a center, still got 30 goals and 27 assists, but hustling Bob MacMillan topped the Blues in scoring with 19 goals and 39 assists for 58 points. Larry Patey surprised everyone with 21-29-50 and ancient Red Berenson did all right with 49. Veteran Claude Larose punched home 29 goals and added 19 assists for a super 48 point year.

Hockey players go to the stats each day like some people thumb first thing to the horoscopes; they check the point totals, the plus-blowers each year?

For those of you who thrive on such figures have you noticed a number next to Captain Garry Unger 29-year-old 5'11", 170 pound center of the St. Louis Blues who was traded away by the Maple Leafs in 1968. As of early December, 1976, Unger had played in 667 consecutive NHL games. Each time Garry plays he establishes an all time League record, surpassing Andy Hebenton's record of 630 successive games. That fact, of course, may not mean much to those of you who find figures too dry for your emotional tastes. Unger is eminently memorable. For Garry can now be considered the Lou Gehrig of hockey, the iron man of a sport which is much faster, tougher and rougher than baseball, and most anything else for that matter. Unger is hockey's Superman, the Six Million Dollar Man of his sport.

©S. Blies history

One of Francis' first moves was to name Unger the team captain, in a rather obvious attempt to tell Unger he was important and show him that he was expected to be a team leader.

But it wasn't a role to which Unger, an individualist all the way, responded favorably. Although the Blues won the Smythe Division title that season, all was not well.

In fact, the division title was clinched mathematically on a night when the Blues played one of their most lethargic games of the season, in a loss to the Islanders in New York, with the clinching coming when Chicago also lost that night.

The next night, after the Blues had traveled from New York to Minnesota, Francis called for a practice at 10 p.m. It was after that practice that Francis relieved Unger of his duties as captain,

St Louis Blues Program Jan 27 1977

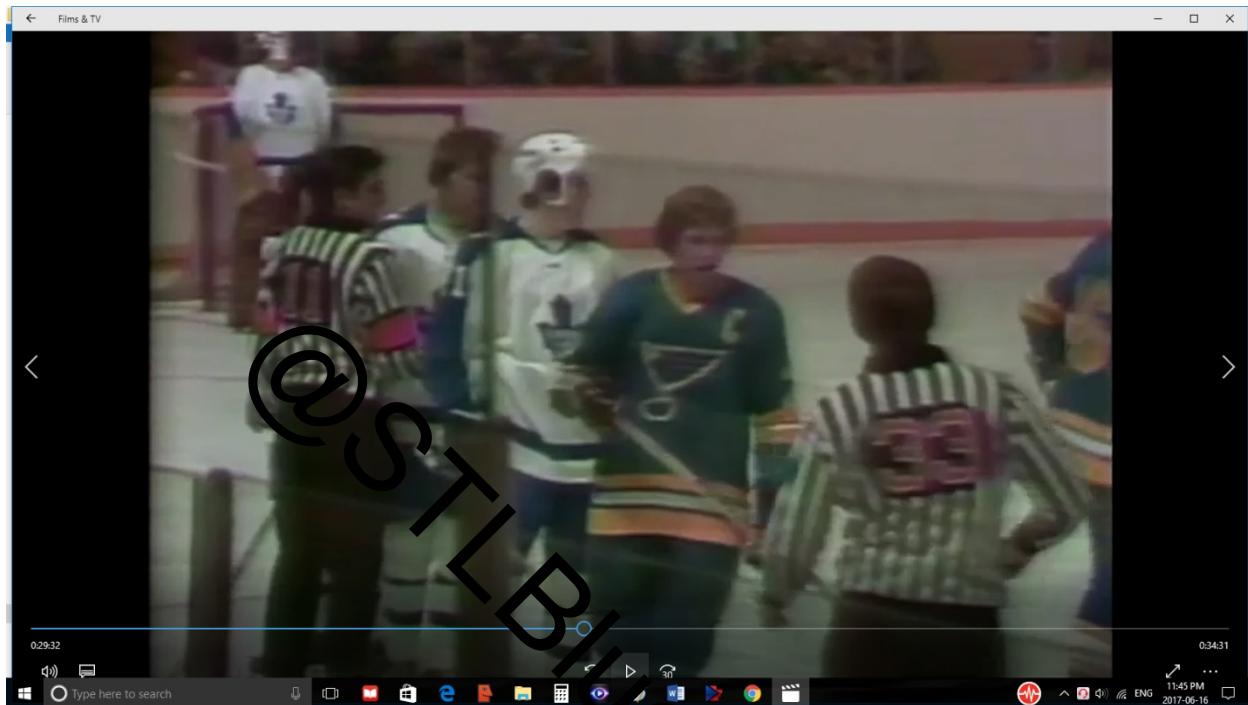

Considering the thumping, slashing nature of hockey, and the fierce enthusiasm Garry Unger brings to his work, for the Blues' captain to go a season without missing any games would seem highly commendable.

That he should have strung nearly 700 games together over a span of eight-plus seasons — without ever sitting one night out, especially in an era when employees don't always feel obligated to put forth a day's work for a day's pay — is little short of remarkable.

Yet Unger, whose National Hoc-

Undated photo (We know it's not from 1970-72 range) KOHO sticks did not make it to NHL until 1972 and that is not one of the early versions. The gloves are not 1970-72 and neither is his hair. That of course leads us to 1976-77 time frame.
